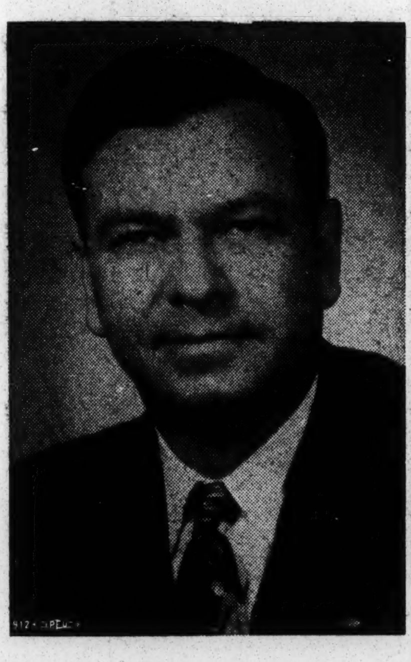
H an Talmadge Says:

NATION'S DEFENSE DEMANDS REVISED MANPOWER CONCEPT



Put yourself in the place of a boy turning 18 today.

To what would you have to look forward? A future in which nothing is certain except a period of service in the armed forces, the length of which is dependent upon whether you enlisted, were drafted or joined a National Guard or reserve unit.

You would find yourself in the frustrating position of being unable to make any concrete plans about anything—getting a college education, learning a trade or establishing a home. You probably would fall into the paralyzing lethargy which has stricken so many of our young men, that is, shelving hopes and ambitions and sitting down in idleness to await the inevitable.

Practical Solution

This need not be and, if members of Congress would take a realistic view of the problem as they consider legislation to continue selective service, it would not be.

Although we are living in a supersonic atomic age, we still are relying upon a system as antiquated as the horse and buggy for the procurement and training of the men who make up our military establishment. As a result we not only are discouraging and making fatalists out of our teen-agers but we also are failing to realize the goal of complete preparedness toward which we are diligently

Talmadge's Weekly TV Program Is Subject Of Magazine Article

Former Governor Herman Talmadge was the featured personality in the March 12-18 issue of TV Digest, a weekly magazine published in Atlanta for television fans.

Talmadge's picture was printed on the cover of the publication and the issue's principal article was devoted to his wide experience as a television personality. particularly his current role as commentator on current events on his own weekly program, "Georgia Spotlight," over Station WAGA-TV of Atlanta.

The story stated that Talmadge decided to undertake a regular, sponsored television program because it afforded "an excellent opportunity to stay in touch with my friends."

"I don't have the time or the resources to travel all over the State as I have in the past speaking before all kinds of groups," the Digest quotes him as saying. "TV gives me a means and a way of talking directly to large portions of the population at one time —200,000 to 300,000 at a time."

The Former Governor's program is sponsored by the Gordy Tire Company of Atlanta and Talmadge told the TV Digest reporter that he expects it to run "at least through the calendar year 1955." It is carried by Station WAGA-TV (Channel 5) at 7:00 p.m. each Monday.

Talmadge expressed the belief in the interview for the article that future political campaigns in Georgia will be waged largely through the medium of television.

"Future campaigns will be largely waged on television. You can work with all your might and main, shake hands with everyone you can find, be constantly on the stump, and still not hope to reach more than 25 per cent of the voters in even the most aggressive personal campaign. Through television you can reach all the voters, with much less tiring campaigning," he stated.

"Television is the best weapon out what I have to say, being colored, edited or slanted in any way. It is second best only to visiting with a family in its own living room."

The Magazine also asked Talmadge about his television style. He replied:

"The oratorical pitches don't go over so well on television, though they may be very effective on the stump. I use a calm, deliberate, rational, reasonable approach on TV. The viewer sitting in the quite comfort of his home is not subject to the emotional hysteria of the stump."

In summation, the article had this to say:

"Talmadge is one of the nation's most televised public figures. He appeared twice monthly on "Capitol Reports" on WAGA-TV from October, 1953, until he left the governor's mansion in 1955. In addition, he has appeared on numerous network telecasts from time to time."

Rate Of Increase In Georgia Exports Leads U. S. In '54

Shipments Show 117.8 Per Cent Increase Over The Corresponding Period In 1953

Indications are that Georgia will lead the entire nation in rate of increase in exports to other countries through its ports when final figures for 1954 on that phase of the State's business activities are received, the Atlanta field office of the U. S. Department of Commerce said.

In the first 11 months of the year, shipments to other countries valued at $69,700,000 went through second largest in the Southeast. In the first 11 months of 1953, the value of shipments from other concrete plans about anything—getting a college education, learning a trade or establishing a home. You probably would fall into the paralyzing lethargy which has stricken so many of our young men, that is, shelving hopes and ambitions and sitting down in idleness to await the inevitable.

Practical Solution

This need not be and, if members of Congress would take a realistic view of the problem as they consider legislation to continue selective service, it would not be.

Although we are living in a supersonic atomic age, we still are relying upon a system as antiquated as the horse and buggy for the procurement and training of the men who make up our military establishment. As a result we not only are discouraging and making fatalists out of our teen-agers but we also are failing to realize the goal of complete preparedness toward which we are diligently striving.

What we have failed to realize is that it is impossible to produce long-range results with wartime emergency procedures which, at their very best, are makeshift. We have ignored the practical economic and human problems inherent in a system which attempts to force all our young men into the same mold.

Plan Offered

What this nation needs, as I see it, is a two-fold defense plan encompassing (1) compact, fully-manned, professional striking forces and (2) a ready reserve trained at home and fully-equipped to be mobilized on a 24-hour notice.

Some men take to the military life better than others. Many actually like the life of the soldier, airman, sailor or marine.

It is these men who should be attracted into the standing, professional army. They should be offered every incentive in the way of pay and benefits which would make their jobs in the armed services comparable in compensation with similar positions in the world of business and industry.

These forces should be equipped with the latest, best and most powerful weapons. They should be capable of moving into a combat zone as fast as it is possible for planes and ships to transport them. They should have their equipment ready, their gear packed and their guns loaded—standing by to cope with any emergency upon call.

Nothing should be denied these forces in the way of equipment or weapons. Their ranks should be kept full at all times and replacements should be in training to step into vacancies as they occur. They should have no more officers of high rank than are justified and a strict retirement program should be enacted—these in order to provide opportunity of regular promotion as incentives to career servicemen.

Train at Home

This striking force should be augmented by a potent ready reserve organized and trained at the local level. It should be so established that young men who desire to remain at home can receive all their training there.

Training should be under the direction of the Military Departments of the individual states and should begin during high school and include attendance at summer camps during the junior and senior years. Then, after graduation, the young man should be given the choice of:

1. remaining at home by enlisting in an active National Guard or local reserve unit for the specified period of military obligation.

2. going to college by taking additional ROTC training to qualify for a commission, followed by a specified period of service on active duty or assignment to an active unit back home.

3. being drafted and, after a specified period of service on active duty, required membership in the active reserve or National Guard.

- Such a program would assure those who wish to remain in their home towns that they could do so without neglecting their military obligation.
- Such a program would allow those who want college training to have it without the fear of interruption.
- Such a program would be fair in its application and would insure equality of sacrifice. Those who refused to take advantage of either of the more attractive alternatives would then become subject to the draft just as they are now.
- Such a program would not weaken the traditional National Guard or reserve programs but, on the contrary, would build both into full-strength striking forces ready for quick response and effective service in case of national emergency.

Better All Around

It is my firm belief that this two-fold manpower program not only would insure this nation of maximum preparedness but also would provide for greater efficiency and less cost to the national treasury. It also would assure the highest possible esprit d'corps and guarantee that young men would not be subjected to patterns of social conduct contrary to their upbringing. And, perhaps most important, it would provide for state autonomy in the training of our youth and assure that, within required standards of uniformity, our program of defense training would be carried out under the direction and according to the wishes of local people.

The Korean War proved that we are as soft in our defenses as we were before World War II.

The only effective remedy I see is for us to adopt a realistic manpower program and see that our men are trained to defend this country without disrupting their lives or bankrupting this country.

Security demands it.

Youth deserves it.

In Georgia Exports Leads U. S. In '54

Shipments Show 117.8 Per Cent Increase Over The Corresponding Period In 1953

Indications are that Georgia will lead the entire nation in rate of increase in exports to other countries through its ports when final figures for 1954 on that phase of the State's business activities are received, the Atlanta field office of the U. S. Department of Commerce said.

In the first 11 months of the year, shipments to other countries valued at $69,700,000 went through the State's ports, at Savannah, Brunswick and Atlanta, an increase of 117.8 per cent over the corresponding period in 1953.

The figures, compiled by Merrill C. Lofton, manager of the Commerce Department office in Atlanta, showed that in the 11-month period of 1954, shipments through Georgia's customs district in both exports and imports approximated $123,100,000 in value with imports recording a total of some $53,400,000.

The 117.8 per cent rise in value of exports was unequalled in the 44 other customs districts in the United States. The nearest thing to it, Mr. Lofton said, was an advance of 96.8 per cent at the Alaska customs district, where foreign trading is relatively small.

IN FACT, it was stated, only a little more than half of the nation's world trading centers reflected increases in value of exports in the 11-month period of 1954 over 1953, and in the nation as a whole a decrease of 4 per cent was registered.

From January through November of 1953 the value of exports going out from the Georgia ports was approximately $32,000,000.

Georgia also reported a rise in value of imports of 2.7 per cent, second largest in the Southeast. In the first 11 months of 1953, the value of shipments from other countries through the State's customs district was placed at $52,000,000.

Speaking Dates

Former Governor Herman Talmadge will address the Atlanta Advertising Institute at their meeting at Emory University on Friday March 18th and that evening the governor will attend a laymens dinner at the Peachtree Christian Church in Atlanta.

Then on Monday March 21st the governor will fly to Montgomery, Ala., to address the Alabama Forest Products Association and will return to Atlanta that night for his regular television show over WAGA-TV.

On Thursday, March 23, Talmadge will be in Abbeville, Ga., to speak to the third district Georgia Federation of Womens Clubs.

Wheeler Blasts Hoover Group's Hospital Report

Pete Wheeler, director of the State Veterans Service Department, has blasted the Hoover Commission's recent recommendation to curtail the government's medical program for veterans.

"The commission's figures are completely misleading," he said.

Wheeler declared that the commission's report said that medical care for veterans was costing more than $4,000,000,000 a year but that the $4,000,000,000 figure "was the total appropriation for the entire VA program."

Wheeler said in 1946 appropriations to the VA totaled approximately $8,000,000,000 for 18,000,000 veterans. He said this year the appropriation was $4,000,000,000 with approximately 21,000,000 veterans to care for. An additional three million veterans have been added, although the VA appropriation has been cut 50%.

The director said the total number of VA hospital beds is approximately 108,000, of which some 63 per cent are taken by mental and tubercular patients.

Wheeler said with so many beds being taken by these type patient, "the VA can not afford to cut down on hospital construction as strongly recommended by the Hoover Commission."

Wheeler asserted that money spent in VA hospitals helps the non-veteran through research. As an example he gave the recent studies in tuberculosis which he said "resulted in advanced treatment that has cut the period of hospitalization considerably."

The director said "I resented the commission referring to veterans as goldbricks—the commission should see the boys who are hospitalized for conditions resulting from combat."

You Can't Buy Friends

From—GRIFFIN DAILY NEWS

Herman Talmadge, speaking in Griffin yesterday, again demonstrated his knowledge of national and international affairs and proved that he is not limited to regional status.

Among other things, he pointed out that Uncle Sam "can't buy friends with silver and gold."

Now although we believe that some of the money spent abroad has been spent wisely, we are becoming more and more convinced that a lot of it has been poured down rat holes.

As Herman Talmadge said, instead of making friends, we've been sowing distrust among people who think we are trying to buy them. And perhaps

Solons Ask Atlanta Division Be Made Separate College

A legislative sub-committee is urging that the Atlanta Division be completely separated from the University of Georgia.

In a special report filed recently, the legislators asked that the Atlanta Division college be expanded to offer degrees in liberal arts and sciences. The college offers many courses in these subjects now, but students must go to Athens for a final year to obtain their degrees. The Atlanta Division currently offers one degree—that of bachelor of business administration.

The committee strongly recommended that the Atlanta Division be established as a separate unit of the University System, and that it be given a new name. It called on the Board of Regents to put these recommendations into effect as soon as feasible and without encroaching on necessary funds of the other units of the University System.

The fact that the Atlanta Division has become the sixth largest institution of its kind in the nation, and a college where students work their way through school, strongly influenced the legislators in making their decision. More than 50 percent of the students work their way through school, and students seeking such a school come from all parts of the state. The committee said it is "highly impressed with the percentage of students earning while learning."

Rep. Ebb Duncan of Carroll County is chairman of the subcommittee of the House University System Committee making the special report. Other members are Reps. Jack Murr of Sumter County, W. C. Massee of Baldwin, Braswell Deen, Jr., of Bacon, and Mac Barber, Jackson. Deen and Barber are graduates of the University of Georgia. Massee and Murr are Mercer graduates, and Duncan is an alumnus of Young Harris.

The sub-committee said it felt a special report was necessary because the Atlanta Division is in imminent danger of losing its accreditation.

New rules adopted by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools require strict control of the Atlanta Division by the parent institution at Athens. This means that the University at Athens will have to fully control the curricula and faculty of the Atlanta Division; that the deans and chairmen of academic departments at Athens must approve faculty personnel and courses offered in Atlanta; that they would have to make regular visits to the branch institution in Atlanta.

"The sub-committee feels that a full compliance with this mandatory provision would entail needless expenditure of money, and would be highly impracticable and prohibitive," the report said.

The group also pointed to the fact that duplicate records would have to be kept in both Athens and Atlanta under the new ruling of the Southern Association.

University of Georgia officials have opposed the separation on the contention that development of a four-year separate college in Atlanta would duplicate offerings at the University in Athens, and would interfere with the development of a great university center at Athens.

Chancellor Harmon Caldwell currently is studying the feasibility of making a separate college of the Atlanta Division. His recommendations are to be placed before the Board of Regents in April.

Walter A. Hobbs, Jr., left, vice-president of the Citizens & Southern National Bank, Atlanta, and Pete DeLoach, assistant livestock specialist for the University of Georgia Agricultural Extension Service, examine some of the 236 purebred sheep purchased recently for use in Georgia. DeLoach visited 17 purebred sheep breeders in Tennessee to buy the animals for the sheep demonstration program being sponsored by the C & S Bank. DeLoach said the 19 farms participating in the program have been stocked. Four of the farms have 30 purebred ewes and one purebred ram each. The 15 others have been stocked with 100 grade ewes and four purebred rams each. There is one or more of the sheep demonstration farms in each congressional district.

As Herman Talmadge said, instead of making friends, we've been sowing distrust among people who think we are trying to buy them. And perhaps that is exactly what we have been trying to do.

You can't buy a friend at home for money. Oh, you can buy a smiling acquaintance, somebody to ride around in a big car with you and enjoy the pleasant things money can buy. But you simply cannot buy a single, honest, sincere friend. And once the money's gone, the fair weather friend goes with it.

We agree with Georgia's illustrious former governor. It's time to quit throwing money away. The United States taxpayer cannot continue to carry the world's financial burdens all by himself without seriously jeopardizing his own position.

As they used to shout at his father, "You tell 'em Herman!"

New Paper Industry

From—SAVANNAH MORNING NEWS

Production of another major forest industry in Georgia may be the result of the successful creation of paper from bamboo at the Herty Foundation Laboratories.

Dr. Reavis C. Sproull, director of the laboratories, has distributed sample tablets of the paper product. He announced that large scale experiments have been contracted for by the Plant Industry Division of the United States Department of Agriculture.

The sample tablets are made of a good quality of white paper composed of 56 per cent bamboo, 12 per cent soda pulp and 12 per cent bleached kraft. Bamboo used in the experiments came from the U. S. D. A. bamboo farm near Savannah.

From simple beginnings in 1931, under the direction of the late Dr. Charles Homer Herty, the Herty laboratory has evolved into one of the world's leading paper experiment stations. It has fostered developments of multi-million dollar paper industries the world over and opens even wider production horizons as a result of its latest experiments.

Georgians Are Proud Of State's Vocational Rehabilitation Record

From—THE MACON TELEGRAPH

Georgians look with considerable pride upon the record their state is making in the field of vocational rehabilitation of physically handicapped persons.

Last year about 4,000 individuals were in gainful employment after receiving treatment under the state's vocational rehabilitation plan.

That figure exceeded the total of such handicapped persons helped by any other state in the union, 325 more than the number assisted in New York.

A good part of this splendid work has gone on here in Bibb County.

More than 1,100 persons suffering with one sort of impairment or another have been given their opportunity to earn their own livings in Bibb County after having received treatment under the rehabilitation program.

In the past 10 years 54 blind persons in this county have been placed in jobs. The average cost of rehabilitating a blind person, according to Dr. Paul S. Barrett, state director of rehabilitation, is $624. That is, indeed, a cheap price.

The rehabilitation program training is made up of many phases and individuals are prepared for various professions and general business occupations.

Physical needs are cared for, too. In some cases, surgical care and hospitalization are needed. Other persons are provided artificial limbs, wheel chairs and such.

Costs of the program are borne by the state and the federal government. The state's appropriation is matched by Washington, which also pays administration expenses.

The unit cost of the program is, of course, small in comparison with the economic value of making self-supporting citizens of these handicapped persons.

The dignity and satisfaction provided these disabled persons by enabling them to make a go of it on their own cannot be measured in terms of dollars. It is too precious for that.

It is highly gratifying that Georgia is in the forefront of this splendid type of program and we hope that the state leads the way for many years to come.

Mail Insurance Again Drawing Fire Of Cravey

ATLANTA—State Insurance Commissioner Zack D. Cravey today again issued a stern warning to all Georgians to beware of out-of-state mail order liability and health and accident isurance companies.

Riled by the hundreds of inquiries his office has recently received regarding mail order companies, foreign to Georgia, which are presently blanketing the state with "the vilest and most misleading advertising I have ever encountered," the commissioner urged his constituency to buy insurance only from agents and companies duly licensed in the state.

"The advertising these companies are circulating in my opinion is 'sucker bait'," Mr. Cravey stated. "One mailing its literature from one state and purportly representing an outfit in another, is even offering cash prizes in a manner which appears to me to constitute a lottery."

The commissioner said he was having the attorney-general's office check with federal authorities to ascertain if such literature legally could be sent through the mails.

"I have always frowned on out-of-state mail order insurance," Mr. Cravey explained, "because the companies are not licensed in Georgia, have no licensed agents here and perforce the policy buyer has no legal protection in the state. He buys the insurance at his own risk."

He called attention to an article several years ago in Coronet magazine which appointed out that mail order insurance companies fleece the American people out of over $100,000,000 annually.

"These figures are appalling and should act as a real bar to those contemplating trading with these out of state mail order houses," he concluded.

Georgia Leading South In Lumber

The South in 1953 produced an estimated 11,264,000,000 board feet of lumber, according to a final report just released through the Atlanta field office of the U. S. Department of Commerce.

This was a slight reduction from the 12,186,000,000 feet produced in the previous year.

The report, prepared by the Bureau of the Census and made public by Merrill C. Lofton, manager of the Commerce Department Atlanta office, credited North Carolina with the production of 1,797,000,000 feet, Alabama, 1,470,000,000, and Mississippi, 825,000,000.

No figures for Georgia were given because, the Census Bureau explained, there would be some danger of violating the standard error of estimate.

000 feet, the New England and Middle Atlantic States, 2,334,000,000, and the Central and Prairie States, where production totalled 2,111,000,000 feet.

Plans Move Along For Polio Shots Final Word in April

Each county health department in Georgia is being supplied this week with a complete kit of information on plans for carrying out this year's program for giving a series of three polio shots to first and second graders.

The information comes from the National Polio Foundation and the Georgia Department of Public Health.

The kit contains the complete story of the vaccine developed by Dr. Jonas E. Salk of the University of Pittsburgh and used in 44 states last year to determine its effectiveness. Also included are questions and answers and news announcements for use by newspapers, radio stations and television stations. Other items are a procedure manual, request forms to be signed by parents who wish their children to receive the vaccine, and bulletins for use by school teachers.

Parents will receive the forms in addition to a letter from the local health department explaining what the polio program is and what to do with the forms.

Dr. T. F. Sellers, state health director, said he wished to continue to remind all parents that final reports of the effectiveness of the Salk vaccine will not be completed until April. No vaccine will be sent out before that time, and it will be sent only if a study now being completed at the University of Michigan shows that it prevented the children who received shots last spring from being infected with paralytic polio during the 1954 summer polio season that followed.

Vaccine will be supplied to the Georgia Health Department by the National Polio Foundation.

Dr. Sellers and William Ferry, Georgia representative for the Foundation, explained further the reasons for restricting the shots this year to first and second graders. These children were selected because polio occurs more often among them than in older school children, and because a successful prevention program must reach large groups of children.

I Pay All My Servants
With One Small Check!

THE LADY means her electric servants, of course. They take so much of the heavy work out of housework. They help her sew, cook, clean, wash and iron, at a moment's notice.

Chances are that over the years you have added many wired helpers. For our average residential customer is using more than 3½ times as much electricity as 20 years ago.

While your use of electricity has gone up, the price has come down. You get almost twice as much for your money as you did 20 years ago.

Just go through your house. Look at all of your electric servants. Consider their total wages — pennies a day! Don't you agree that electricity is by far the biggest bargain in your family budget?

estimated 11,264,000,000 board feet of lumber, according to a final report just released through the Atlanta field office of the U. S. Department of Commerce.

This was a slight reduction from the 12,186,000,000 feet produced in the previous year.

The report, prepared by the Bureau of the Census and made public by Merrill C. Lofton, manager of the Commerce Department Atlanta office, credited North Carolina with the production of 1,797,000,000 feet, Alabama, 1,470,000,000, and Mississippi, 825,000,000.

No figures for Georgia were given because, the Census Bureau explained, there would be some danger of violating the standard error of estimate.

Georgia, whose output in 1953 was not estimated in the report, has been leading the South in yearly production of lumber. In 1952, its total output was 2,082,000,000 feet and in 1951, 2,177,000,000 feet.

Production in the South Atlantic, East Gulf, and Lower Mississippi States, constituting the South and representing most of the lumber-producing area of the eastern half of the United States, amounted to about 36 per cent of the nation's total of 36,742,000,000 board feet.

The 1953 output in the region did not quite equal the 12,175,000,000 feet produced in the two North Pacific States of Oregon and Washington, but it far exceeded production in the South Pacific States, which totalled 5,109,000,-

Join Home Town Commerce Group, Advises Candler

ATLANTA, Ga.—(GPS)—"We want to help you, and we will help you, but you all must help us, too."

That's the message Scott Candler, secretary of the Georgia Department of Commerce, is leaving in community after community as he goes around the state addressing chambers of commerce, boards of trade and other groups charged with promoting the best interest of Georgia at the local level.

For one thing, Candler thinks the enrollment in some chambers of commerce is entirely too small for the number of people who live in the particular county. Local commerce bodies with representative membership means much to a community in promoting its best interests.

"In the last two or three years the number of industries in Georgia has grown from 3,100 to 7,300," he says. "The Georgia Department of Commerce's goal this year is 300 new industries with 30,000 new jobs. Industries look to all phases of life before selecting a community in which to locate.

"It is imperative, therefore, for Georgia communities to be awake to improve their standards of living. We must develop our state industrially in order to preserve its institutions; develop it educationally in order to progress, and develop it religiously in order to keep it."

Talmadge Hospital Policy Set

ATLANTA, Ga.—The university system board of regents last week established policies for the operation of the huge Eugene Talmadge Memorial Hospital at Augusta.

The board passed a four-point resolution for operation of the 15 million dollar, 800-bed hospital which is administered jointly with the State Board of Health.

The institution will operate as a "closed hospital," and only full or part-time faculty members will be permitted to practice.

Only patients unable to pay and certified for admission by health and welfare agencies will be admitted. Only in rare instances will pay patients be admitted.

Patients who are able to pay part of the cost will reimburse the hospital according to their ability to pay.

All fees for services rendered will go to the hospital and will be used to pay non-salary expenses.

The regents said the latter feature avoids salary payments to doctors out of fees collected by the hospital which had been objected to as a phase of "corporate practice" of medicine.
